Becoming Digital: Empowering Students Through the Digital Humanities

You know about DH,
But how do you use DH?

Join Professor Ella Howard
September 29 at 5:30pm
in CAS 132
To find out!

How will digital tools and methods inform your work?

Currently Associate Professor at Armstrong Atlantic State University in Savannah, Georgia, Ella Howard took her Ph.D. in American Studies from BU in 2007. Her dissertation on the culture, politics, and spatial geography of skid rows with a focus on NYC, became her first book, Homeless: Poverty and Place in Urban America, published by the University of Pennsylvania Press. At Armstrong (see http://armstrongdigitalhistory.org), she’s developed numerous digital humanities projects, using a wide range of digital tools for research and teaching.