² Received from Carmen Cicchetti , former Research Director of the Office of the Commissioner of Probation via e-mail to Senator Karen Spilka on Wednesday, July 12, 2006 at 3:46 PM.

³ DSS CHINS Cases in CY 2005, through DSS' FamilyNet system that still indicated an active CHINS in CY 2005. An ad hoc query was utilized to produce an extract that listed every child with an active home removal episode in CY 2005 for at least one day. The extract also indicated if a child was a CHINS case. The extract was pulled in early August 2006. Submitted by: Ruben Ferreira, Director, Office of Management, Planning and Analysis Department of Social Services.

⁴ From document titled Juvenile Court Clinic Database, Division of Forensic Mental Health, MA Department of Mental Health. A referral can be made for court clinic evaluation at any point after the Petition has been filed and the child afforded an attorney. However, while CHINS cases are the most common referral to juvenile court clinics statewide, not all CHINS cases are referred to the court clinic. When they are referred, they can be referred at any point from the filing of the Petition and the appointment of counsel through the dismissal of the case at its conclusion. The court clinic referral may be made by the court to gather information and recommendations on a wide and often complex variety of issues.
