

Being a parent can be really fun, exciting, and special.

But sometimes parents of young children with special needs find it is hard to do the things they want to do. Doing things at home, with friends and family, or in the neighborhood may be hard.

PREPARED is a research study looking for parents with children ages 1-3 years old in EI (Early Intervention). What do you do when things are hard for your child? We want to hear about your ideas and experiences!

We want to talk with all parents, including parents who:

- Identify as a minority.
- Have a high school education or less.
- Have not completed trainings in parent advocacy or rights.
- Speak English as a second language.
